

Bio Stuart McAllan, Improvement Advisor

Career Overview

After two years modern apprenticeship training with NHS Tayside, I qualified as a Pharmacy Technician in 2005. Over 14 years service within Tayside, I have worked in rural primary care, community hospital settings and latterly acute secondary care contributing to delivering patient centred pharmaceutical care. I was introduced to patient safety and quality improvement via the Older People in Acute Care Collaborative. I found an intrinsic passion for improvement and led a position of lead pharmacy technician for quality improvement for 4 years.

I am a proud member of the Scottish Improvement Leader Cohort 9. My motivation is to be part of the development of others by practicing improvement methodologies that are accessible for all to take part in, improving the services we deliver. I believe that even the smallest of investments in taking time to think about our systems, how we work with each other and applying improvement principles can lead to sustained improvements in care for everyone.
